In 2021, CBMM partnered with Needle’s Eye Academy to provide a hands-on component to the organization’s mission to improve literacy among students of color in Talbot County. Working with CBMM’s staff in its Rising Tide Workshop Annex, the Needle’s Eye students learned about shipbuilding and sailmaking using tools from Albert and Downes Curtis’s former sail loft in Oxford. The Curtis brothers were prominent African-American entrepreneurs during the 20th century, and CBMM is proud to count objects from their loft among its collection.

On behalf of the Chesapeake Bay Maritime Museum’s Board of Governors, I thank you. Our success this past year is due in every way to your support, your dedication, and a mission-focused commitment from the entire CBMM community.

The support outlined in this issue of The Chesapeake Log is evidence of CBMM’s strength and wide reach throughout the region. What we do is enjoyed by tens of thousands, for the reasons behind what we do fulfill a mission to preserve, protect, and educate all who connect with us concerning the vital significance of the Chesapeake Bay in the past, present, and future.

Earlier this year, the helm passed from Dick Bodorff to me as chair of the Board of Governors. We all owe Dick a great debt of thanks. With his leadership, we weathered the pandemic and saw the completion of the reproduction of Maryland Dove, all the while leading a charge for the funding that has allowed us to break ground on a new CBMM Welcome Center. No question, Dick set a high bar during his tenure!

As always, exciting things are in store for us at CBMM with Kristen Greenaway’s leadership. She provides a preview in her message about new initiatives that she and her fine team are planning.

One thing does not change! Your support continues to remain vital for pre-K–12 and adult education programming, our Rising Tide after-school and summer program, new and relevant exhibitions, online or in-person access to our collection, on- and off-the-water experiences, preservation of our floating fleet, and the passing on of traditional boatbuilding skills through the shipwright apprentice program.

One last thought: when you say to yourself, “I really need to find a gift,” think of our revitalized CBMM store!

Let’s all enjoy the year ahead! ★
Gifts to the Collection

Through donations, purchase, and transfer, CBMM added some outstanding items to our artifact, photograph, manuscript, and library collections this fiscal year, including a Maryland Bay Pilot’s leather coat from World War II; harpoons for hunting stingrays; photographs of the 1970s build of Maryland Dove; a watercolor, “Members only, Tangier Island,” by Marc Castelli; an oil painting, “Double Battery on the Susquehanna Flats,” by Hermann Simon; a handmade outfit by Mary “Mama Girl” Onley; oral histories from both the shipwrights who worked on the 1970s build of Maryland Dove and the Chesapeake Bay Maritime Museum shipwrights who worked on its successor; a Girl Scout Mariner uniform; folk art sculptures by Waverly Evans; and a variety of books, including “Working the Waterfront: A Maritime History of Annapolis and the Chesapeake Bay” by Stephen Ritterbush, “Icy Winters on the Chesapeake Bay: A History” by James L. Foster, and “Chesapeake Bay Ducking Guns, Baltimore Made” by C. John Sullivan Jr.

Interested in donating to the CBMM collection? Please visit cbmm.org/libraryinfo and note on the research request form that you would like to make an object donation, or email collections@cbmm.org with a description and image of the donation. Thank you!

Gifts to The Annual Fund, Endowment, Comprehensive Campaign, Collection, Sponsorships, Pre-Boating Party and Boating Party, or otherwise restricted, are listed below. Every gift is greatly appreciated! Thank you!

CBMM Volunteers

CBMM’s volunteer team has played a key role in welcoming back more guests to CBMM and resuming the services we provide for the Chesapeake. From programs, to revitalized exhibition signage, to groups visiting from all over the country, our current and new volunteers have been with us every step of the way, serving as the connection between CBMM’s work and the communities we serve.
